

The Polyisocyanurate Insulation Manufacturers Association Joins BOMA International as Newest Supporting Partner

(WASHINGTON, DC—May 24, 2006) The Polyisocyanurate Insulation Manufacturers Association (PIMA), the national trade association that advances the use of energy-efficient polyisocyanurate (polyiso) insulation, is the latest Supporting Partner of the Building Owners and Managers Association (BOMA) International. PIMA's Supporting Partner status includes a pledge of $10,000 to support crucial programs in education, advocacy, research and membership.

Since 2004 BOMA's partnership program has allowed companies to support the commercial real estate industry while investing in their own success and viability. Partnering organizations can participate at three levels: Cornerstone Partner ($50,000), Leadership Circle ($25,000) and Supporting Partner ($10,000).

"Partnering with PIMA sends an important message about the value and necessity of using sustainable and cost-effective insulation products like polyiso in commercial property construction. By working together, the collective membership of both organizations will benefit through shared knowledge, education and resources," said BOMA International Chairman, David W. Hewett, RPA, CPM, CCIM, FMA, CFM, principal for Trammell Crow Company, Auburn Hills, Michigan.

"PIMA is pleased to partner with BOMA to raise awareness and understanding about the economic benefit and energy efficiency potential of well designed and maintained commercial buildings," said PIMA President Jared Blum. "We look forward to a long-term joint effort to raise the performance bar for our nation's commercial buildings."

PIMA is a leading advocate for energy efficient practices and policies in the country. By advancing the use of the EPA-recognized polyiso insulation, PIMA is a proactive promoter of safe, cost-effective, sustainable and energy efficient construction.
